Will they face defeat or triumph? In the end, only one will find his soul mate, and only one will find the one he has been looking for all of his life. While older men do look for the “quick and easy”, the young don’t. In this drama, Takahiro (Kensho Ono) is a single, reserved and chaste young man who, through perseverance, finally finds his soul mate. But his best friend, Toru (Satoshi Matsumoto), the “black sheep” of the group, is going through a tough time with an ex-girlfriend. No matter what, one thing is certain: both Toru and Takahiro have had enough of the opposite sex. What Takahiro and Toru find, however, is a lot more than simply “what they wanted”. The two find themselves in the middle of a girl’s power game, where a woman will go through the most horrific methods to get what she wants, while the boys are forced to become more open and to learn about what they really want in a woman. Will their passions be enough to overcome the difficulties? Comments Kanoko yumyyyyyyyyy Doubt it would last 3 weeks... It'll probably take about a day and a half, tops. There are around 70 episodes, the show takes place over 3 months, but I think that they're going to cut it down to 2 months so that Takahiro and Toru can spend more time with each other. I haven't read the comments yet but a few people have said that they will probably end in a couple of days. I'd like to know if that's true. One of the things that's been done a lot in romantic comedies (though not many romance dramas in general) is that the characters never confess their feelings or commitment at the beginning, or they have to be super secretive about it and it leads them into a situation where they're forced to make a decision. This drama seems to be doing that already (possibly with some exceptions 82157476af
